The weight is where it's wanted in a 'one-piece' car—it's near the ground

You want resistance in a car body; endurance; beauty of form and finish—but not weight. And that's why a 'one-piece' car with a P'S'C pressed steel body gives you bodywork as it is meant to be. All the virtues of strength are there without the bulk of clumsy top hamper.

All that useless body weight has disappeared; the wooden sill between body and chassis is gone. Body and chassis grip one another; steel joined to steel. You get lower lines without loss of head room. You find the weight where it's wanted—along the line of the wheel-base—near the ground.

A P'S'C built body consists of four main units of Pressed Steel welded into one . . . light but very strong. This body is fixed direct to the chassis so that body and chassis are unified. In this P'S'C 'one-piece' construction, chassis and body-frame and body itself are all one and all-steel. Without costing any more a P'S'C Pressed Steel body adds a great deal to the comfort, appearance and safety of your car. Ask about P'S'C when you buy your new car. Ask if the body is of P'S'C Pressed Steel—made on the P'S'C 'one-piece' principle.

P.S.C. Pressed Steel was adopted in the Hillman Wizard—the car of the moderns.
